

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A load control device having a power control element connected in series to a series circuit of a load and an alternating power supply and a snubber circuit comprises suppressing means for suppressing current flowing through the snubber circuit when the load is not in operation and for suppressing current flowing through the snubber circuit during a predetermined period which begins when the power control element shifts from an ON state to an OFF state.